Inactive – Employer Uninterested	The employer has decided they are not interested in pursuing registered apprenticeship as a work-based learning solution for their business at this time. They may still be active with other WIOA or IBST-related programs, however.
Inactive - Lack of Training Providers	There are currently no local or accredited online training providers to accommodate the employer’s desired apprenticeship occupation.
Inactive – Three Month Communication Lapse	The employer has not responded to calls/emails for a period longer than three months, or it has been three months since the last follow-up correspondence.
Referral Stage	The employer contact has been successfully referred through an IBST partner, event, or cold call. Information on employer location, potential occupations, and preferred training providers is being collected at this time.
Exploratory Stage	An initial consultation or apprenticeship-specific follow-up has been scheduled or completed with the employer, but they have not yet committed to developing their program.
Active Development	The employer has agreed to move forward with their apprenticeship and the specialist is currently in the process of solidifying the work process, curriculum, and wage determinations for program submission.
Stagnated – Work Process Selection	Program development has stagnated for a period of less than three months due to inability to procure or decide on an existing work process schedule.
Stagnated – Curriculum Selection	Program development has stagnated for a period of less than three months due to difficulty finding, selecting, or finalizing logistics for related technical instruction.
Stagnated – Wage Determinations	Program development has stagnated for a period of less than three months due to employer difficulty determining or getting organizational approval for the program’s progressive wage schedule.
Finalizing Details for Submission	The specialist is preparing to submit the completed program to the DOL via Standards Builder and may be collecting miscellaneous required information from the employer or training provider.
Submitted to Standards Builder	The program has been submitted to Standards Builder and the specialist is awaiting a request for revisions or approval from their DOL ATR.
In Revision with Department of Labor	The program is currently undergoing revisions with DOL, after which it will be approved for registration.
Approved, awaiting Signature	The program standards are awaiting employer or DOL signature for final registration approval.
Signed and Approved	The program is fully registered with the Department of Labor and now exists in RAPIDS.
